

HP News * 10/4/17

The winds kept shifting in seemingly random directions. At first, it seemed that they were from the west, so Dave set a mark across the lake. For good measure, he set another mark toward the dam. When I left the dock a minute later, I thought the windward mark should be by Hurricane Gulch.

We wound up sailing a triangle. Start, Hurricane Gulch, cove across the lake, dam, finish, repeat for lap 2. The winds were also quite light. In lap 2, we only sailed to the Gulch and then finished.

For race 2, we sailed clockwise leaving all marks to starboard. This time there were fewer calm spells so we finished 2 full laps.

For the 2nd week in a row, we were graced by the presence of Mark Miller. He didn't bring his boat, but the local rules score him as 1 place behind the last real boat, so 3rd place. For the moment, this puts Mark in the lead for the 5th glass and just 1 point behind Art! Sometimes the important thing is to just show up.

Next week will be the last that Stevens Creek Reservoir is open for 2017. After that Shoreline in MV.
